SUBJECT: ENGLISH COMPREHENSION

The Mice and the Elephants

Read an interesting story from the Panchatantra.

It was a very hot summer. All the rivers had run dry. A thirsty herd of wild elephants wandered in search of water but they were in no luck for many days. One day, deep in the forest, the elephants saw a lake. They ran towards it. The sound of their running would have put the roaring thunder to shame!

A large family of mice lived near the lake. Many of the mice were hurt when the elephants ran to the lake. The mice had a meeting. 'Let us go to the leader of the elephants. We should ask him to use another way to the lake, said an old mouse. So, they went to the leader of the herd and said, 'O King, we have lived near the lake for many years. When you came to drink water, many of us were hurt. Could you please use another route to get to the lake? We may be able to help you.' The leader of the elephants was very kind. He said to them, 'Please do not worry. I shall tell my herd to use another route.' The mice were very happy and went home. The elephant however thought to himself, 'How can these teeny-weeny mice help us?

A fortnight later, the elephants went to the lake to bathe and quench their thirst. They were not aware that some cruel hunters had laid out some traps for them. The leader got ensnared in one of them. He was in agony. In fear, he trumpeted loud and long. The hunters, who were hiding behind the trees, came rushing towards the leader. They pulled the poor elephant away and tied him to a heavy stone post. They planned to keep captivity and use him to pull logs through thick forests and over long distances.

The family of mice had seen what had happened. They remembered their promise and waited for their chance to help the elephant. They came close to him and bit through the ropes that were used to tie him to the post. Soon, elephant was free. He thanked his friends and went back
